Only a woman of decided character or a woman of pronounced indifference to personal appearance ignores the changing modes in hair dressing. If a woman has discovered beyond possibility of mistake that a certain simple style of coiffure suits her perfectly and emphasizes her individual: charm-she shows profound wisdom in holding to that coiffure through all the changing fashions.

It lends her individuality and distinction, sets her apart from the crowd. But, we repeat, the absolute fitness of this coiffure must be beyond contention; Many women really do not know who have been and one's own personal taste is not always a safe guide.

Another point to be emphasized is the samplicity to which we have already reforced. A coffure that is to endure year after year must have nothing of the bizarrie or Irresikis, must be natural and must either be a testimonial to beautiful natural hair or a concession to a type of face and figure.

So on the whole it is a safer and simpler proposition to make some concession to the prevailing mode in confure, though it is by no means necessary to subscribe all the vagaries, and indeed exaggeration.

"Another reduction agent for the woman who is bent upon getting her woman who is bent upon getting her figure down is corn meal. It should be of the coarse variety, with plenty of big rough grains in it. This corn meal is kept in a big stone jug in the bathroom and it is used twice a day to reduce the figure. You apply it by means of a scrubbing brush with soap and very not water.

"The sensation is as though sand were being slipped all over your body. The corn meal takes hold of the fleeh and makes it tingle. In a little while you are all agow. Then out of the bath you step and into a big dressing gown of Turkish towelling you go. You take a nap of half an hour and then you are ready for another sorubbing of the same kind.

"Women who go to the corn meal cures of London to be reduced find that they can by attention to the job in hand scrub off as much as a pound of weight r. day, but if only part of the day is to be devoted to it the result will be less.

go into the flesh, wake it up, and somehow or other make you thinner. A woman who took the pea scrubbing every day for two weeks reported that her flesh was fine and firm and smooth.
She had lost seven pounds and was going to begin on her next seven.

"Women who want to be slim and swaying are trying the Kellermann treatment.
They do not own tanks like that in which Annette Kellermann disports, but they seek the pools, rivers and ocean during the season, and at other times they look up the swimming baths. Into these they plunge, not to swim but to take the stretching exercises. The principle on which they work is that the water makes you graceful.

"Fish as they swim are marvels of graceful beauty. The child trailing its hand from shore or boat is learning the principles of grace. The hand trails after the arm and the arm trails after the body. With these ideas in mind the seeker for graceful slenderness trails hand or foot through the water. She studies the movement so that she can reproduce it on dry land.

"This isn't all there is in the matter of willowiness. The woman who is going to look slimmer than she really is and who is going to fool the world as to her inches must take a lesson in dress.

"The toques of the year if put on properly make a woman look tall, but they mustn't be worn on one side or too far over the nose. Long straight lines make a woman look taller and thinner than she really is, but she must understand how to arrange the lines.

"Swaying a little is the secret of the whole thing. Study a tree in the park and you will notice that, tall and slim though it is, it looks all the taller and all the slimmer if it sways a little. And this brings you to another point; namely, that of reducing the figure below the belt line. One Way an Economical Woman Can Keep Up With the Modes. Making hats and dresses do double
